One of London's most iconic hotels, the 5-star Mandarin Oriental, received a stunning new lighting scheme for the refurbishment of guestrooms, corridors and public areas. This new look was the result of a close collaboration between Chelsom,

Individual statement chandeliers in the suites and guestrooms further enhance the uniqueness of every room. Chandeliers in the suites take on organic forms with branch like brass arms across the ceiling. Other chandeliers feature a trio of asymmetrically positioned metal backplates to act as reflectors to the backlit light sources while magnanimous square pendants adorned with ribbed glass rods and ponytails of hair line the corridors.

Chelsom have been sensitive to the interior architecture in all of the public areas, and in the main entrance ultra-shallow light units housing integral LED light sources. Each light unit features faux alabaster bottom diffusers and solid clear glass rods positioned around the perimeter creating a sparkle of twinkling light.

With reference to the nearby Royal Horseguards Parade, corridor and bathroom light fittings were manufactured using synthetic horse hair. Bathroom wall sconces show the hair wrapped tightly around lobby have supplied modernised balustrade mounted light fixtures which continue the theme of crackled glass tones with rich brass metalwork. Existing chandeliers in the Rosebury Lounge were refurbished, upgrading the technology and restoring the metalwork.
